Section I: President's Welcome

Welcome to Punta Cana!

We hope the program and social networking of the meeting will benefit you in your role as the champion of Physiology at your institution. This year, many of the meeting topics were selected as a result of a 2012 survey that helped identify areas of shared interest among the membership of ACDP. The compiled results of the survey are included in this booklet.

Please note that the meeting schedule is different this year. We shall have our first presentation Thursday evening, and will have Friday and Saturday afternoons open. Section II of this booklet has a listing of local excursions that provides some nice all-day entertainment alternatives for those joining you on the trip, and gives some ideas of what to do on those open afternoons.

Enjoy the meeting!

ACDP Business Meeting I Minutes

I. Call to Order

The Business Meeting was convened by President Gary Sieck at 2:12 pm on December 2, 2011.

II. Approval of 2010 Draft Meeting Minutes

The minutes from the 2010 Business Meetings were unanimously approved as submitted.

III. Announcement of 2011 Guyton Award Lectureship

Sieck announced that the 4th Arthur Guyton Lectureship will be given by Paul Welling, Ph.D. from University of Maryland Medical School. The lecture is titled "Potassium Channels Find Their Way in Membrane Traffic."

IV. Announcement of 2011 Distinguished Service Awardee

Sieck also announced that R. John Solaro, Ph.D., from the University of Illinois, at Chicago will be presented with the 2011 ACDP Distinguished Service Award at the banquet. Solaro will be honored for his service to ACDP and physiology as a discipline.

V. Call for Nominations for Officer Positions

A call was made for nominations for President-elect, Secretary-Treasurer, two open Councilor positions, and Council of Academic Societies (CAS) representative. The membership was reminded that the nominees for President need to have previously served on Council as either Councilors or Secretary-Treasurer.

VI. CAS Updates

Navar and Webb described the roles of the CAS representatives and the governance of the AAMC. Navar recently finished serving his second term on the CAS Board. He announced that he would be willing to serve one more year to offset terms for the two representatives. He encouraged anyone interested in serving as CAS representative to make it a several-year commitment so there would be the opportunity after a few years of visibility for that person to be elected to the CAS Board. Representatives attend the spring meeting of CAS and also the annual AAMC meeting, where CAS plays a role in programming that meeting. He noted that it is very important to have strong ties between ACDP and CAS. However, there are discussions underway in AAMC about changing the composition of CAS. Navar and Webb will monitor that discussion and report back to the membership regarding possible changes.

VII. Financial Report

The financial report was presented by Secretary-Treasurer Susan DeMesquita. The Association remains in sound financial condition. She pointed out that there is a large difference between the 2010 and 2011 numbers as of September 30 each year. This is a result of Classic Travel handling the registratons. Only expenses for the first hotel payment are showing for 2011 until the final reconciliation, which will happen later this month or January, depending when the hotel finalizes the bill. However, `if those figures are considered, then the bottom lines for the two years are very similar. A final 2011 budget will be presented at the 2012 ACDP meeting held during the Experimental Biology meeting. The financial report was accepted unanimously by the attendees.

The meeting was adjourned until the following day at 11:15 am.

ACDP Business Meeting II Minutes

I. Call to re-convene

Sieck reconvened the business meeting at 11:15 pm on December 3, 2011.

II. Election of Officers

The slate of nominees for President-elect, Secretary-Treasurer, Councilors, and CAS Representative was announced and the membership voted by secret ballot. Muthu Periasamy was elected President-elect. Bishr Omary and Charles Wood were elected Councilors with terms ending in 2014. L. Gabriel Navar was elected to serve 1 additional year as CAS Representative.

III. 2012 ACDP Meeting

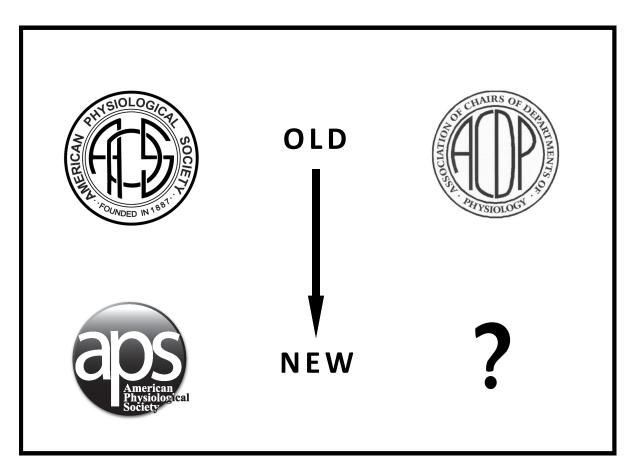

Marshall Montrose, ACDP President-elect, announced that he was still researching where to hold the 2012 ACDP meeting. However, the dates will be November 30 – December 2, 2012. He is looking at all-inclusive resorts that will allow meeting costs to remain low. He requested ideas for possible locations for the meeting. As soon as a decision is made and the contract signed, members will be notified.

IV. Adjournment

The meeting was adjourned at 12:00 pm.

Respectfully submitted,

Susan DeMesquita Secretary-Treasurer

2012 Arthur Guyton Distinguished Lecturer

Irena Levitan, Ph.D. Associate Professor Departments of Medicine, Pharmacology and Bioengineering

rena Levitan, Ph.D., received her Ph.D. in Neurobiology from the Hebrew University of Jerusalem. She is an Associate Professor in the Departments of Medicine, Pharmacology and Bioengineering at the University of Illinois at Chicago.

Dr. Levitan's research interests focus on cholesterol regulation of ion channels and cellular biomechanics. Research in Dr. Levitan's lab focuses on the impact of dyslipidemia on endothelial dysfunction, a key early stage in the development of Atherosclerosis. Their primary objective is to determine how elevation in membrane cholesterol and oxidized lipids affect endothelial ion channels and the biomechanical properties of the membrane.

Dr. Levitan's group has discovered that cholesterol suppresses endothelial Kir channels, a major type of endothelial ion channels in vitro and in vivo. The studies also provided the first mechanistic structural insights into cholesterol regulation of K⁺ channels. Currently, the lab is focusing on identifying cholesterol binding site of Kir channels and determining the impact of this effect on endothelial function. They also study the roles of bacterial toxins on K⁺ channel function and the role of these channels in inflammation.

Dr. Levitan's group has also discovered that plasma dyslipidemia induces endothelial stiffening and increase in endothelial force generation, an effect that is associated with disregulated angiogenesis. The lab is investigating the mechanisms of oxLDL-induced endothelial stiffening and its implications for angiogenesis. They also investigate the cross-talk between oxidized lipids and matrix stiffness in the regulation of angiogenesis in lung fibrosis.

Dr. Levitan's memberships include American Biophysical Society, American Physiological Society and American Heart Association, Council on Arteriosclerosis, and Thrombosis and Vascular Biology.

Association of Chairs of Departments of Physiology Arthur C. Guyton Distinguished Lectureship Award

The Arthur C. Guyton Distinguished Lectureship Award was instituted in 2006 to recognize outstanding and cutting edge research in physiology or related areas. Awardees are invited to attend the ACDP fall meeting and present a seminar on their research.

Awardees are selected by the President in conjunction with members of Council based on membership recommendations. They receive travel, hotel, food, complimentary registration and an honorarium of $1,000.

The Award was named for the late Arthur C. Guyton, University of Mississippi, a well-known researcher, educator, author, and long-time department chair. He was the only person to be awarded both the ACDP Outstanding Teaching Award and the ACDP Distinguished Service Award.

Francisco H. Andrade, Ph.D. Associate Professor Department of Physiology University of Kentucky

Tijuana, Mexico. He always knew he was going to be a scientist. Early on Dr. Andrade decided that he was going to study medicine and then get into biomedical research. When it came time to choose a college, he selected the Instituto Technologico y de Estudios Superiores de Monterrey in Monterrey, Mexico, a medical school in a university that is known for its strong program in engineering and computer science. He graduated in 1988 with a Bachelor of Medicine degree. After he completed his undergraduate studies, he moved to the U.S. and attended graduate school at the University of Texas Health Science Center in San Antonio. In 1994, he received his PhD in physiology studying how muscles fatigue. He continued his training on muscle function as a postdoctoral fellow at Baylor College of Medicine, as a postdoctoral scholar at the University of Kentucky Medical Center and as a research associate at Case Western Reserve University. Dr. Andrade also had the opportunity to spend a year (1996-1997) in Sweden at the Karolinska Institute as a guest investigator. In 1998, he accepted a position at Case Western Reserve University as an assistant professor in the department of neurology. In the spring of 2004, Dr. Andrade accepted a position as associate professor in the department of physiology at the University of Kentucky, and in 2011, he was appointed professor and associate chair of the department. Dr. Andrade was a founding member of the Center for Muscle Biology at the University of Kentucky.

Dr. Andrade's research focuses on how muscles work and adapt to changing condition. Most of his projects focus on trying to understand the inner workings of very specialized muscles: Extraocular muscles and muscles that control the larynx. This research covers the function of normal muscles and their central controller (the brain) to diseases that target different steps of the process. A majority of Dr. Andrade's time is devoted to keeping the research operation going. He coordinates projects, writes grant proposals and manuscripts, sustains collaborations, and handles the administrative load that comes with his extramural funding: Budgets, personnel issues, regulatory issues, etc.

On a personal note, Dr. Andrade enjoys reading, listening to music, cooking, and exploring the extensive Lexington metropolitan area, including its somewhat famous suburbs Cincinnati and Louisville.

Sandra Degen, Ph.D. Professor and Interim Chair Department of Molecular Genetics, Biochemistry and Microbiology College of Medicine University of Cincinnati

andra Degen, PhD, interim chair of Molecular Genetics, Biochemistry & Microbiology in the College of Medicine at the University of Cincinnati, is also a professor of pediatrics and associate chair for academic affairs in the UC College of Medicine's Department of Pediatrics and Cincinnati Children's Hospital.

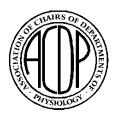

After receiving a PhD in biochemistry from the University of Washington, Dr. Degen completed two years of postdoctoral work at the Friedrich Miescher Institute, Basel, Switzerland. She joined the faculty and staff of the College of Medicine and Cincinnati Children's Research Foundation in 1985. Dr. Degen's scientific interests include the biological function of the blood coagulation agent prothrombin, as well as a protein identified in her lab that is involved in growth control. She enjoyed continuous grant support since she received her first academic position until 2006. Degen holds three patents for her discoveries. In addition to continuous NIH support for her research until 2006, Dr. Degen has been awarded $4M in grant and endowment support since 1997 from the Charlotte R. Schmidlapp Foundation to support the Center for Career Development of Women in Pediatrics.

Her many honors include being chosen as a Pew Scholar in the Biomedical Sciences, awarded an Established Investigatorship from the American Heart Association, membership of the Hematology II Study Section at the National Institutes of Health, and participation in the Executive Leadership in Academic Medicine Program. She was also awarded the 2005 Special Recognition Award in Thrombosis from the American Heart Association and elected as a Fellow of the American Association for the Advancement of Science (AAAS) in 2011. Dr. Degen currently serves on the board of directors for the Cincinnati Youth Collaborative. Degen was been appointed by the Governor of Ohio to the Third Frontier Advisory Board from 2009-2011.

Dr. Degen has had several administrative roles within the university, including Associate Senior Vice President for Health Affairs (200-2004) and Vice President for Research (2004-2011).

On the personal side, Dr. Degen has been married for 35 years to Jay Degen, PhD, who is also a Professor of Pediatrics at the University of Cincinnati. They have one child, Lindsay, who is 23 years old, who recently graduated from the Rhode Island School of Design and puts their lives into perspective.

Martin Frank, Ph.D. Executive Director American Physiological Society

artin Frank, Ph.D., has been the Executive Director of the American Physiological Society, Bethesda, MD since 1985. In 2004, he helped found the Washington DC Principles Coalition for Free Access to Science, a Coalition that represents approximately 70 not-for-profit society and university press publishers. Frank received his Ph.D. in Physiology and Biophysics from the University of Illinois, Urbana, in 1973 working under Dr. William W. Sleator. He served as a research associate in the Cellular Physiology Laboratory, Michigan Cancer

Foundation, Detroit, and in the Department of Pharmacology and Toxicology, Michigan State University, East Lansing. In 1975, he joined the Department of Physiology, George Washington University School of Medicine, Washington, DC, as an assistant professor. From 1978-1985, he served as the Executive Secretary, Physiology Study Section, Division of Research Grants, National Institutes of Health, Bethesda, MD. From 1983-1985, he was a Member, Senior Executive Service Candidate Development Program, Department of Health and Human Services, Washington, D.C. As part of the program, he served as a policy analyst in the Office of the Assistant Secretary of Health, DHHS.

Geoffrey Hammond, Ph.D. Head of the Department of Cellular & Physiological Sciences

Life Sciences Centre
The University of British Columbia

eoffrey Hammond, Ph.D., became Head of the Department of Cellular & Physiological Sciences at UBC on March 1, 2012. Dr. Hammond obtained his undergraduate training in Biochemistry at the University College of North Wales, Bangor. He obtained a MSc from the Medical Research Council (MRC) Steroid Endocrinology Unit at the University of Leeds in 1974, and continued his postgraduate training in Biochemistry at the Clinical Chemistry Department of the University of Oulu, Finland, where he received his PhD degree in 1978. After completing his postdoctoral training in the Reproductive Biology

From 1984 to 2002, Dr. Hammond was a member of the Faculty of Medicine and Dentistry at the University of Western Ontario, where he held appointments as Professor in the Departments of Obstetrics & Gynecology, Pharmacology & Toxicology, and Oncology. Between 1986 and 1997, Dr. Hammond was the recipient of an Ontario Cancer Research and Treatment Foundation Research Scholarship. In the 1990s he also served as the first Director of the Cancer Research Laboratories at the London Regional Cancer Centre, and was appointed as the first Ivey Chair in Molecular Toxicology at the University of Western Ontario in 2000. From 2003 to 2012, Dr. Hammond served as the Scientific and Deputy Director of the Child & Family Research Institute. He is currently a Professor in the UBC Departments of Cellular & Physiological Sciences and Obstetrics & Gynaecology and holds a Tier I Canada Research Chair in Reproductive Health.

Dr. Hammond is recognized internationally as an expert in the area of steroid hormone action and his research work has been funded primarily by the Canadian Institutes of Health Research. He has published more than 200 scientific articles and reviews, and has served on numerous editorial boards and organizing committees of international meetings. Dr. Hammond holds several patents, and many of the reagents he has produced and methods he has developed are used worldwide as diagnostic tools.

Patricia Molina completed her MD training at the Universidad Francisco Marroquin in Guatemala, Central America. Thereafter, she pursued a PhD in Physiology at LSUHSC under the mentorship of Dr. John J. Spitzer, presenting her dissertation on "Ethanolendotoxin interaction with carbohydrate metabolism". Her postdoctoral experience at Vanderbilt University was supported by a NIGMS Minority Supplement Grant under the mentorship of Dr. Naji N. Abumrad. She progressed through the academic ranks initially as an Assistant Professor of Surgery and Physiology at the State University of New York, Stony Brook and subsequently as Director of Surgical Research at North Shore University Hospital. During that period, she held a Guest Scientist appointment at Brookhaven National Laboratory prior to joining the Department of Physiology at LSUHSC as an Associate Professor. Since becoming a faculty member at LSUHSC, Dr. Molina has obtained tenure and promotion to the rank of Professor, and has been named the Richard Ashman, PhD Professor in Physiology. On September 2008, she was appointed Department Head for Physiology. Dr. Molina's research has been funded continuously since completing her PhD degree. She has mentored several undergraduate, graduate and post-doctoral trainees. Dr. Molina is a member of the faculty of the School of Graduate Studies, the Graduate Education Committee in Physiology, The Graduate Advisory Council, and is a mentor for the LSUHSC Interdisciplinary Graduate Program. Dr. Molina is an active member of several committees within the LSUHSC and is also actively involved in the Scientific Community outside the institution. Currently, she is the Chair for the National Hispanic Science Network on Drug Abuse and Councilor of the American Physiological Society.

Research in her laboratory focuses on the impact of alcohol and drug abuse on the cardiovascular, metabolic and immune consequences of acute traumatic injury and hemorrhagic shock. In addition, work in her laboratory also investigates the interaction of chronic alcohol and cannabinoid use on the behavioral, metabolic, and immune consequences of HIV/AIDS. Currently, work in her laboratory is funded by NIAAA, NIDA, and CDMRP.

M. Bishr Omary, M.D., Ph.D. Professor and Chair Department of Molecular & Integrative Physiology University of Michigan

ishr Omary received his PhD training in chemistry and cell biology at the University of California San Diego (UCSD), then his MD from the University of Miami. After his internal medicine residency at UC Irvine, followed by a gastroenterology fellowship at UCSD, he joined the Division of Gastroenterology at Stanford University where he became Chief of the Division and Director of its NIH-funded Digestive Disease Center. He moved to the University of Michigan in 2008 to become Chair of the Department of Molecular & Integrative Physiology, Professor of Internal Medicine and H. Marvin Pollard Professor of Gastroenterology. His editorial experiences include serving as Associate Editor of Gastroenterology (2006-2011) and Molecular Biology of the Cell (2004-2011).

Dr. Bishr's current research focuses on several areas including: (i) Studying the cytoskeletal intermediate filament proteins that are specifically expressed in digestive-type epithelia, termed keratin polypeptides 8, 18, 19 and 20 (K8/K18/K19/K20). This includes studying their regulation via phosphorylation, glycosylation and other posttranslational modifications; studying their regulation via identifying and characterizing their associated proteins; and their function and disease association. For example, his research has demonstrated that mutations in K8, K18 and K19 predispose their carriers to acute and chronic forms of liver disease and are associated with disease progression. (ii) Understanding the molecular pathogenesis and significance of the hepatocyte inclusions, termed Mallory-Denk bodies. For example, he has identified several critical genetic and posttranslational modifications that are essential for the formation of the inclusions. (iii) Defining potential therapeutic targets for acute and chronic hepatitis and pancreatitis. This is being pursued, in part, by aiming to understand genetic modifiers that regulate the susceptibility to experimental liver and pancreatic diseases.

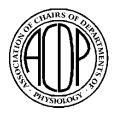

James W. Pichert, Ph.D. Professor of Medical Education & Administration Co-Director, Center for Patient & Professional Advocacy School of Medicine Vanderbilt University

Nashville, TN, is an educational psychologist with special interests in learning and instruction. He is a Professor of Medical Education and Administration at Vanderbilt University School of Medicine, where he has been a faculty member since 1979. His M.S. and Ph.D., both in education, were earned at the University of Illinois at Champaign-Urbana. He received a B.S. in educational research from Bucknell University in Lewisburg, PA. Along with Dr. Gerald Hickson, Jim is Co-director of Vanderbilt's Center for Patient and Professional Advocacy.

Dr. Pichert has longstanding research experience on promoting faculty development and health professionals' patient-related interactions. His work over the past 15 years has focused on identifying metrics and methods that address unnecessary variations in behavior and performance that undermine a healthcare organization's culture of safety. He and his colleagues have transformed those metrics and methods into local risk management initiatives and nationally-benchmarked profiles. Jim has published more than 150 articles in education and health-related journals, has presented his research at many scientific meetings, and has received several awards. Along with Dr. Hickson and others, Dr. Pichert developed the PARS program for training peer "messenger" physicians and medical center leadership to use profiled patient complaint data during interventions on high-risk peer colleagues.

Jim has presented many workshops for academic leaders, physicians and healthcare executives throughout the United States on strategies for promoting professionalism and professional accountability, and communicating about unexpected outcomes and errors.

Gary C. Sieck, Ph.D. Vernon and Earline Dale Professor & Chair Department of Physiology & Biomedical Engineering Mayo Clinic

ary C. Sieck received a BS degree in Zoology from the University of Nebraska in 1971, and a PhD in Physiology and Biophysics from the Univ. of Nebraska Medical Center in 1976. He continued training as a postdoctoral fellow in the Brain Research Institute at the UCLA School of Medicine. In 1979, he was appointed as a Research Assistant Professor in the Department of Anatomy and Cell Biology at UCLA. In 1981, he moved to the City of Hope National Medical Center in Duarte, CA as a Research Scientist in the Department of Respiratory Diseases, while retaining a faculty appointment at UCLA. In 1987, Sieck joined the faculty in the Department of Biomedical Engineering at the Univ. of Southern California where he stayed until 1990, when he joined the Mayo Clinic staff. Dr. Sieck, is currently the Vernon F. and Earline D. Dale Professor and Chair of the Department of Physiology & Biomedical Engineering at Mayo. He is also a Mayo Distinguished Investigator and the Director of the Biomedical Engineering Program in the Mayo Graduate School. From 2006-2012, he also served as Dean for Research Academic Affairs and Deputy Director for Research Operations at Mayo.

Dr. Sieck served as President of the American Physiological Society (2009-2011) and President of the Association of Chairs of Departments of Physiology (2010-2012). He is an elected Fellow of the American Institute of Medical and Biological Engineering. In the past, he served as member of the Board of Directors of the American Thoracic Society and on the Council of the American Lung Association. He was editor-in-chief of the Journal of Applied Physiology from 1999-2005, and is currently editor-in-chief of Physiology. He is also a member of several editorial boards and advisory councils. Dr. Sieck has also served on several study sections of the National Institutes of Health (NIH).

At Mayo, he has mentored 14 predoctoral students, more than 65 postdoctoral fellows and 23 visiting scientists. He is a recipient of both the Mayo Research Educator Award, the Mayo Graduate School Dean's Recognition Award. His research focuses on neural control of respiratory muscles. In the diaphragm muscle, he has explored neuromuscular plasticity related to spinal cord injury and muscle weakness associated with mechanical ventilation and the intensive care environment. In airway smooth muscle, he has examined abnormalities in intracellular calcium regulation and excitation-coupling associated with asthma and chronic obstructive pulmonary disease. He has published more than 340 peer-reviewed papers and his research has been continuously funded by the NIH for more than 30 years.

2	We are a small department of 5 full-time Physiologists. Our best scientists are also our best teachers & contributors to institutional committees. Curriculum reform, which seems to change direction every 2-3 years, results in these individuals being drawn out of their laboratories to head yet another committee. 9	The biggest concern for me as a chair is the changes made in the NIH grant review system. Specifically, the old system allowed 3 revisions of R01 grants, and we all knew what this was for: queueing up for funding. This allowed for planning - especially new investigators. The new system of one revision has destroyed this queuing up system and I cannot plan on when and if faculty in my department will ever receive NIH funding.	May 15, 2012 9:56 AM
10	Financial issues and support from the institution are limiting,-in fact, so limiting, I cannot attend the ADCP meeting. I have only a limited budget and if it comes down to me spending the money on myself or having a trainee attend a meeting, I opt for the latter. I would like to see the ADCP meeting held in a spot like Chicagoeasy to get to, with fairly inexpensive airfare.	May 15, 2012 9:50 AM
11	I would like to hear more about for-profit teaching opportunities and fund raising as a department and how that interferes or is a concern with the university's philanthropy.	May 14, 2012 10:13 AM
